

What Exactly is LinkedIn?

LinkedIn is heralded as the online social community for business professionals and entrepreneurs. What sets it apart from social sites like Facebook and Twitter is the understanding that people join LinkedIn with the goal of expanding their business in some way. Here it's accepted to let your business cards show, so to speak.

Cleverly disguising "tweets" and "updates" to shroud business intentions isn't necessary. Much like offline network meetings, professionals interact on LinkedIn with the explicit intention of making business connections.

Why LinkedIn is Important for Online Business

If the possibilities of one connection expanding into thousands, breezing by gatekeepers to talk directly with decision-makers, and making global ventures from the comfort of your home office sound appealing, then LinkedIn is the platform for you.

Not too long ago, attending networking mixers and Chamber of Commerce meetings were the workhorses for acquiring referrals and building business relationships. Now those activities have moved online within the Linked community. Essentially LinkedIn facilitates these same practices only in a tech-savvy way.

With LinkedIn you get all the benefits of offline networking with less of the hassle. Instead of shuffling from business luncheon to business luncheon "hoping" to meet qualified prospects, LinkedIn provides a platform for you to specifically search and research individuals who you know will directly add value to your endeavors.

Imagine walking into a business function where eager prospects are being introduced to you, colleagues acknowledge your accomplishments without your prompting, and you're in the spotlight for sharing the right answers for inquiries related to your industry. LinkedIn makes these scenarios a daily reality.

LinkedIn's ability to identify, research, contact, follow-up, engage and maintain your contacts in one place is unmatched by other social networks. For individuals who aren't ready to take on the responsibility of a website, LinkedIn could serve as an online business hub to refer business prospects.

Before Creating Profile

Setting up a LinkedIn account is a quick and easy process. You literally could set up an account in five minutes and become an official member of the LinkedIn community. However, speed is not the main objective. Rushing could lead to a sloppy profile that doesn't represent you well which defeats the purpose of joining LinkedIn.

Essentially your profile stands as a resume, business card and elevator speech all rolled into one. Prior to posting any information, there are some proactive steps you can take to ensure your profile works for you and not against you.

First, think about exactly who you want to be and who you want to reach on LinkedIn. What are your initial goals for networking on LinkedIn? Brainstorm ideas of how you plan to position and contribute your expertise.

- Do you want to find partners to collaborate on a project?
- Are you looking for clients within a specific niche or with a certain amount of annual revenues?
- Will you use it as a platform for thought leadership?

With that said, the next point to consider is the realization this social community is not a digital bubble. The general concepts of business still apply on LinkedIn. In the brick-and-mortar business world you have direct competition and it's no different on LinkedIn.

Thoroughly researching competitor's profiles is a preliminary step all savvy professionals should perform prior to creating a profile. If you want to become the go-to professional for your industry it's best to analyze who's holding the top spot.

Don't reinvent the wheel when creating your profile. To start out on the right foot in LinkedIn, figure out what other leaders are doing and do the same. Once you're comfortable using the site, adjust your profile accordingly.

How do you find the profiles of people to model?

A general rule of thumb is that a high search engine ranking stands as a good indicator of a professional who's doing well on LinkedIn for a particular niche.

Use Google search as a fast way to retrieve all the profiles for a niche or keyword on LinkedIn.

1. Go to Google.com.
2. Type in the search string `site:linkedin.com "your keywords"` .

3. Replace the phrase “your keywords” with terms related to your specialty.

Initially, focus on the top search results, and if you're pressed for time the three results. Ideally, your is for your profile to be listed in the top three results your keywords. other social media members commonly use search feature the people they're seeking. A high ranking profile is important. An optimized profile that ranks well ensures you're being seen by targeted searchers.

Visit each of the top listed profiles and take note of how they're representing themselves for your market. In particular, pay attention to the keywords used and their headlines.

How to Set-up a Basic Account

The basic membership to LinkedIn is free and allows you to create a profile. For a large majority of users, the free option is adequate enough to effectively network on the site.

To get started:

1. Go to LinkedIn.com.
2. Select "Join Today".

Once this information is completed, LinkedIn will offer to search the contacts linked to your given email address. Any contacts connected with a web email can be imported to your account at this stage.

Getting the ball rolling to reach out to prospects on LinkedIn couldn't be easier. But if you're not sure about pulling in "all" your emails at this stage, bypass this part. Just choose "Skip This Step" at the bottom of the screen.

Add personality to your profile with a photo of yourself. Be selective about the photo you use. LinkedIn does not allow you to edit a picture once it’s been attached. You can resize, but not edit, so choose wisely.

Lighting, distance, and facial composition are all elements to consider when making your choice. Profiles without pictures come off as less personable. People like to do business with people. A photo of a logo is better than nothing if you’re uncomfortable with a personal photo.

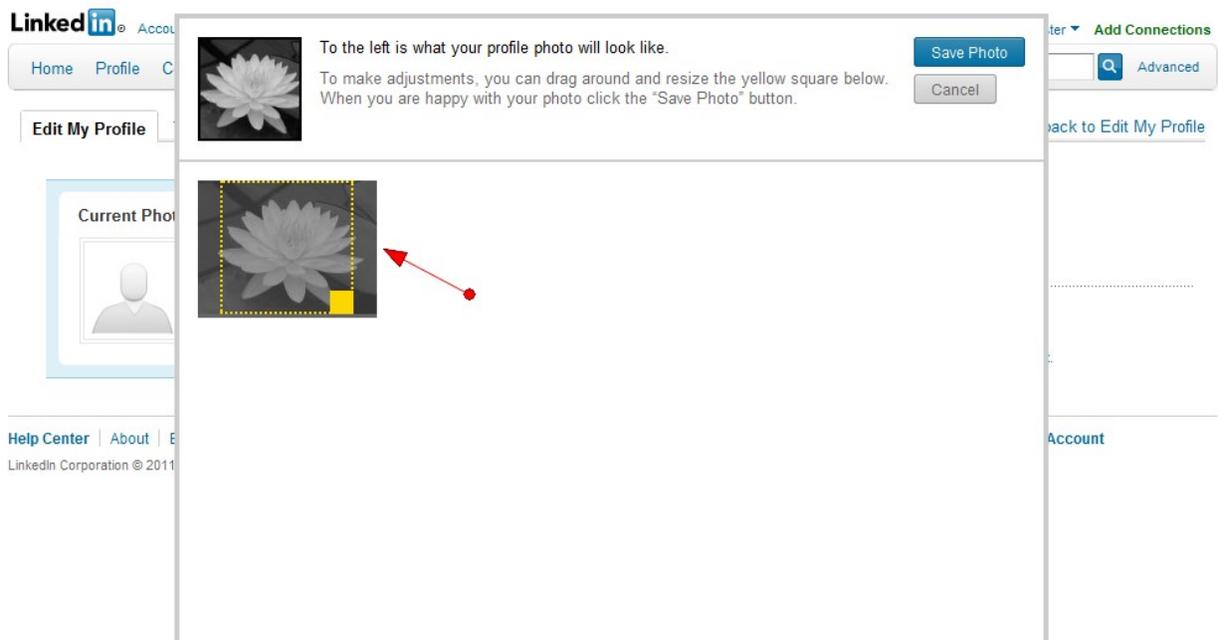

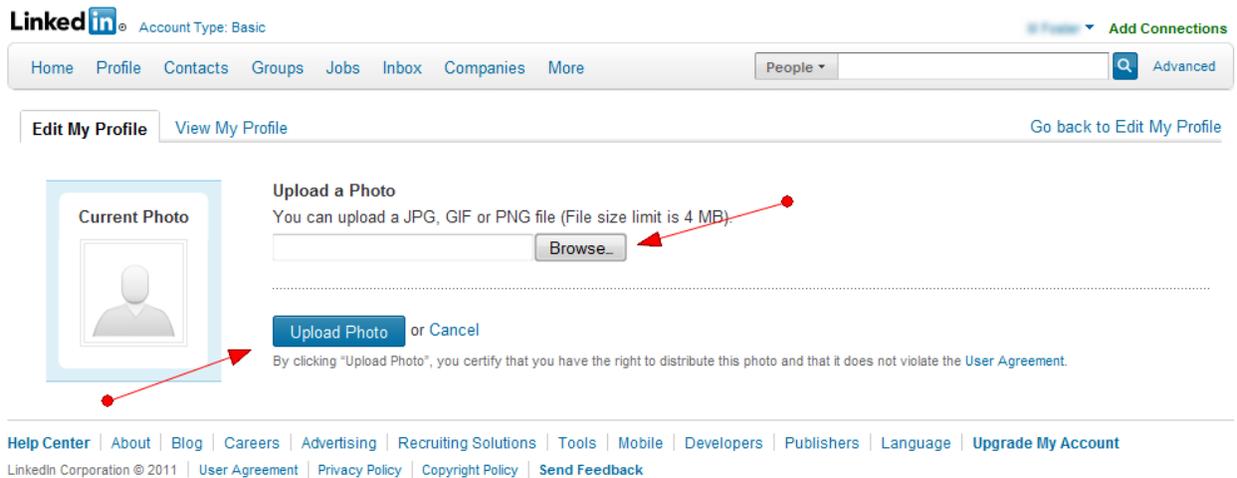

Business headshots are best for the professional environment at LinkedIn. Lifestyle images, like what you’d expect at Facebook, don’t work well here.

1. Select “Profile” from the navigation toolbar.
2. Click “Edit Profile” from the drop-down menu.
3. Once on the editing page, choose “Add Photo”.

The next page allows you to upload an image. Browse your directories to find the picture you want to post to your profile. Also LinkedIn provides a built-in photo cropping feature to capture your headshot.

After saving your photo, designate who should see your image.

Creating Your Headline

The headline area of a profile is prime real estate on LinkedIn. The information put into the headline segment is very important and should be strategically written. Essentially the headline area of your LinkedIn profile is equivalent to your elevator speech. Wikipedia defines an elevator pitch (speech) as:

An elevator pitch is a short summary used to quickly and simply define a product, service, or organization and its value proposition. The name "elevator pitch" reflects the idea that it should be possible to deliver the summary in the time span of an elevator ride, or approximately thirty seconds to two minutes.

Searching for people with LinkedIn's search box returns a listing displaying only photos, names and headlines. Knowing this, you can understand why what's put into the headline is so important.

The screenshot shows the LinkedIn search interface. At the top, the LinkedIn logo and 'Account Type: Basic' are visible. The navigation bar includes 'Home', 'Profile', 'Contacts', 'Groups', 'Jobs', 'Inbox', 'Companies', and 'More'. A search bar contains 'john smith' with a dropdown menu set to 'People'. Below the search bar, there are tabs for 'Find People', 'Advanced People Search', 'Reference Search', and 'Saved Searches'. The search results are displayed in a list format, with 'Sort by: Relevance' and 'View: Basic' options. The first result is for 'JOHN SMITH', Director of Business Development for Financial Service Solutions Groupe at Greater New York City Area | Financial Services. The second result is for 'John Osgoode Smith', Lawyer at SMITH & WERKER in Toronto, Canada Area | Legal Services. The third result is for 'JOHN MICHAEL SMITH CPA', TAX AND ACCOUNTING at JOHN MICHAEL SMITH CPA, PA in Sarasota, Florida Area | Accounting. The fourth result is for 'John Smith', John J Smith at John D Smith in Ottawa, Canada Area | Medical Devices. On the right side, there is a 'Premium Search' sidebar with a 'Find the right people in half the time' headline, a 'Premium Search Tools' section listing 'Premium filters', 'Automatic search alerts', and 'Full profile access', and an 'Upgrade' button. Below the sidebar, there are 'Ads by LinkedIn Members' for 'Cloud Computing Summit'.

A headline filled with the right trigger words is an effective positioning tool. To be known as a SEO copywriter for the financial industry, words related to this specialty need to be in the headline.

To update your headline, from your profile's editing area, choose "Edit" next to your name.

Public Profile vs. Private Profile

Certain segments of a profile can be restricted from public view by non-members. Although it sounds counter-productive, this strategy could work in your favor. Giving public access only to portions of your profile whets the appetite of lurkers just enough to compel them to join and possibly connect with you to find out more.

Whether you display all portions or restrict some, a public profile is an effective business tool. Interested persons often research LinkedIn bios to learn more about you, but don't necessarily want to join the site themselves. A public profile on LinkedIn ensures your professional skills are presented to all people who desire to know more about you.

Change your public profile display by:

1. Clicking "Profile" from the navigation toolbar.
2. Choose "Edit Profile" from the drop-down menu.
3. Scroll the page until you see the "Public Profile" field.
4. Select the "Edit" link to the right of the website address.

Importing Contacts

Now that your profile is finished, it's time to import contacts. Looking for people one by one could waste valuable time better spent networking. You could use the site's search box to locate possible prospects, but LinkedIn provides several ways to streamline this process.

To import contact:

1. Choose the "Contacts" menu from the navigation bar
2. Select "Add connection" from the drop-down menu. There you'll find several choices for importing data.

Whether you decide to have LinkedIn sync with an online email, manually enter contacts yourself, or import from a desktop email, this networking tool makes it simple.

The screenshot shows the LinkedIn 'Add Connections' interface. At the top, the navigation bar includes 'Home', 'Profile', 'Contacts', 'Groups', 'Jobs', 'Inbox', 'Companies', and 'More'. The 'Contacts' menu is highlighted with a red arrow. Below the navigation bar, there are tabs for 'Add Connections', 'Colleagues', 'Classmates', and 'People You May Know'. The 'Add Connections' tab is selected. The main content area is divided into two panels. The left panel, titled 'See Who You Already Know on LinkedIn', contains a form with 'Email:' and 'Password:' fields, a 'Continue' button, and a link to 'Import your desktop email contacts'. The right panel, titled 'Enter Email Addresses', contains a large text input field and a 'Send Invitations' button. Red arrows point to the 'Contacts' menu, the 'Continue' button, and the 'Import your desktop email contacts' link.

Also you'll have the opportunity to approve and decline the additions of emails as LinkedIn searches the designated online email box.

Furthermore, you can upload .csv, .txt, and .vcf files. Most desktop contact management applications, like Outlook, let you export address to one of the file types mentioned.

To use this feature, click on "Import your desktop email contacts". From there you can browse your computer files and attach the document. As with the web email function, you can accept or deny email addresses.

Enter Email Addresses
Enter email addresses of people to invite and connect. Separate each address by a comma.

Importing information does not automatically connect you with people. After importing, each person will receive an invite from you to join your network on LinkedIn. If they accept the invitation then you'll be connected.

Adding the first round of contacts seems like a hassle. Even so, you've got to start somewhere. Keep in mind that all it takes are a few connections to gain access to professionals with the resources to help you realize your goals-whether personal or business.

Customizing Your LinkedIn URL

By default, LinkedIn assigns you a URL with random numbers and letters. For branding purposes, you will want to customize the link. An easy-to-read website address increases the chance of people being able to remember and find you on LinkedIn. Promote your signature link on your blog, Facebook pages, and through email signatures to drive traffic to your profile.

Customize your URL by:

1. Selecting the "Profile" menu from the navigation bar.
2. Click "Edit Profile" from the drop-down menu.
3. Scroll down the page until you see your "Public Profile" website link
4. Choose the "Edit" function to the right of your link.

All LinkedIn website addresses begin with www.linkedin.com/in/. On the next page, enter your preference for a unique URL to the LinkedIn prefix.

The screenshot shows a LinkedIn profile page in edit mode. On the left, there's a list of profile sections: Current, Past, Education, Recommendations, Connections, Websites, Twitter, and Public Profile. The 'Public Profile' section shows the URL <http://www.linkedin.com/pub/.../2a/a00/276> with an 'Edit' link. A red arrow points to this 'Edit' link. On the right, there's a 'Profile Completion Tips' section with a progress bar at 25%. It lists several tips to increase profile completeness, such as 'Add another position (+15%)', 'Add your education (+15%)', 'Add a picture (+5%)', 'Add your summary (+5%)', 'Add your specialties (+5%)', and 'Ask for a recommendation (+5%)'. Below this, there's an advertisement for 'The Contextual Ad Network'.

The screenshot shows the LinkedIn navigation bar at the top with the 'Home' button highlighted. Below the navigation bar, there are two buttons: 'Edit My Profile' and 'View My Profile'. A dialog box titled 'Your Public Profile URL What's this?' is open, showing the current URL: <http://www.linkedin.com/pub/.../2a/a00/276>. It prompts the user to 'Customize this address:' and provides a text input field with the text www.linkedin.com/in/ and a 'Set Address' button. A red arrow points to the text input field. Below the input field, there is a note: 'Note: Your custom URL must contain 5 - 30 alphanumeric characters. Please do not use spaces, symbols, or special characters.'

The Home Page – Your Personal LinkedIn Headquarters

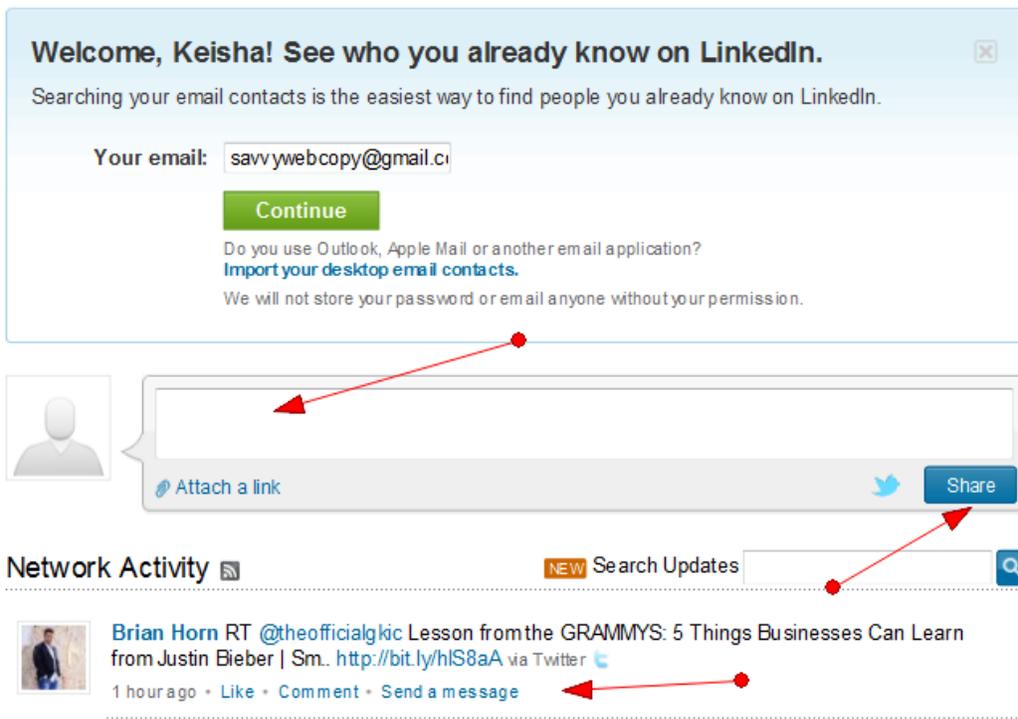

Status updates and announcements from your personal network are posted to the Network Activity portion on your Home Page.

At a glance, the Network Activity area keeps you on top of what's going on with your connections. To make the most of your interactions on LinkedIn, this is an area to check regularly.

Respond directly to individual updates without leaving the Network Activity are by choosing either to "Like", "Comment", or "Send a Message" found below individual updates.

Strategic Tip: Indicating that you like an update or leaving a comment could be discreet ways to gain the attention of people in your network who may be hard to connect with otherwise!

To broadcast your own updates, Input messages into the empty conversation box and click share to send messages to your entire network.

A Little of This, A Little of That

In addition to Network Updates, the Home page notifies you of People You May Know, Who's Viewed Your Profile, and the size of your LinkedIn Network, among other timely tidbits of information.

LinkedIn Applications

LinkedIn offers a handful of applications to enhance your contributions to the community. Applications act as digital automation tools eliminating the need to manually complete different tasks. Ideally, you want to spend more time networking instead of learning how to use applications. At the same time, it's best not to waste valuable energy clunking through busy work that can be minimized with the help of applications.

To add applications:

1. Click the “More” menu from the navigation toolbar.
2. Or select “Add an Application” from the lower right side of your Home page.
3. Or choose “Add an Application” from the sections area while editing your Profile page.

With the goal of highlighting your expertise on LinkedIn in a streamlined manner, here are some recommended applications to get you started.

Tweets Application : Tweets connects your LinkedIn Profile with your Twitter stream. It’s a Twitter utility you can use directly from LinkedIn. Quickly re-tweet and reply to tweets without ever having to leave the website. Personal updates and updates of people you’re following show up on the sidebar of your profile.

Events Application: Are you planning to attend or present at an upcoming conference? Let the LinkedIn community know about your agenda with the Events application. Events recommends seminars related to your industry. Even more, you can read others comments about a particular training. Easily discover which colleagues plan to participate in the same events. It’s an effective way to demonstrate your commitment to continuing education and honing your professional skills.

WordPress: Common advice for enriching one’s experience with you on social media sites speaks to giving significant valuable directly from within the site-without requiring the person to leave the website. The WordPress application does this and more. Broadcast your insights by syncing blog posts with your LinkedIn profile. A special feature allows you to tag only the posts you want to display on your profile.

LinkedIn Privacy Settings

Protecting member’s privacy is vital to an online networking community. Especially for a professional social site liked LinkedIn, ripe with high profile contacts and industry leaders. LinkedIn addresses this concern through its comprehensive privacy settings control panel. Beyond the tweaks shared earlier for managing privacy in specific segments, on the privacy settings page you have the choice to customize all elements of your personal data.

Find the privacy settings area by:

1. Clicking your “Name” at the top, right-hand side of your profile page.
2. Select “Settings” from the drop-down menu.

The screenshot shows the LinkedIn account settings page. At the top, the LinkedIn logo and account type (Basic) are visible. The navigation bar includes Home, Profile, Contacts, Groups, Jobs, Inbox, Companies, and More. A search bar with a dropdown menu is present, and a red arrow points to the 'Settings' option in the dropdown. Below the navigation bar, the 'Account' section is displayed, showing account type (Basic) and options to view purchase history or compare account types. There are two promotional banners: one for upgrading to a Premium account (highlighting more communication features and powerful search) and another for InMail (highlighting 0 available). The 'Settings' section is highlighted with a green checkmark and a red arrow. It is divided into two columns: 'Profile Settings' and 'Personal Information'. Under 'Profile Settings', there are links for 'My Profile', 'My Profile Photo', and 'Public Profile'. Under 'Personal Information', there are links for 'Name & Location', 'Email Addresses', and 'Change Password'.

Email Settings: Contact Settings, Receiving Messages, and Invitation Filtering

Settings worth paying attention to are the Email Settings. Inmails and Introductions, found in the Contact Settings sub-category, fuel the ability for member's to make connections through LinkedIn beyond their personal networks. Later you'll learn more about Inmails and Introductions, and exactly how to use them. For now take note these features determine how accessible you are to the LinkedIn community.

Furthermore, avoid missing important Inmails and Introductions by customizing how you're to be notified when you receive them. The Receiving Messages feature presents a detailed time-grid to specify exactly when and how often notifications are released.

Receiving Messages

LinkedIn will send you a notification when you receive important messages from other users. How would you like to receive these notifications?

		Individual Email Send emails to me immediately	Daily Digest Email Send one bundle per day	Weekly Digest Email Send one bundle email per week	No Email Read messages on the website
General

Just as it sounds, the Invitation Filtering function sifts invites based on your selection of whether or not to receive invites outside of your immediate network. Depending on your personal reasons for joining LinkedIn, it's advised to initially accept all invites to increase the chances of growing your connections.

Invitation Filtering

Connecting on LinkedIn is the best way to stay in touch with trusted contacts, and each invitation you accept can add hundreds of professionals to your network.

You can control how you'll be notified of the invitations you receive.

Notify me of...

- All invitations (Recommended)
- Only invitations from people who know my email address or appear in my "Imported Contacts" list.
- Only invitations from people who appear in my "Imported Contacts" list.
Tip: Don't miss invitations from people who matter to you. Add people to your "Imported Contacts" list

The Mechanics of LinkedIn

After opening an account, creating a profile, and importing personal contacts you're ready to move out into the larger network. LinkedIn works for you based on who you already know. People you know and who acknowledge knowing you are bridges to new connections.

LinkedIn employs a tier system for organizing member's relationships. A person's position in relation to your personal network dictates the actions you'll have to take to add them to your network.

LinkedIn's hierarchy of connections is primarily structured in three levels. Your direct contacts are marked as 1st level, the contacts of your first level contacts are marked as 2nd level, and if someone is linked with a person who in turn is connected with one of your direct contacts that person is tagged as a 3rd level contact. If you have no connection, then they're identified as out of network.

Also, all of the contacts of your 1st level contacts are made visible to you. LinkedIn even reveals the number of shared connections you have with a person, and the identity of the shared connections.

The screenshot shows the LinkedIn search interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with 'Home', 'Profile', 'Contacts', 'Groups', 'Jobs', 'Inbox 3', 'Companies', and 'More'. A search bar contains 'People' and an 'Advanced' search button. Below the navigation bar, there are tabs for 'Find People', 'Advanced People Search', 'Reference Search', and 'Saved Searches'. The main search area has a search box, a 'Keep filter selections' checkbox, and a 'Search' button. To the left, there's a 'Refine By' section with 'Location' and 'Relationship' filters. The search results are sorted by 'Relevance' and shown in 'Basic' view. Three red arrows point to specific elements: the first arrow points to the '3rd' badge next to Richelle Shaw's name; the second arrow points to the '2nd' badge next to Brenda Prinzavalli's name; and the third arrow points to the '1 shared connection' link between them. On the right side, there's a 'Premium Search' sidebar with a 'Premium Search Tools' section listing 'Premium filters', 'Automatic search alerts', and 'Full profile access', along with an 'Upgrade' button and a 'Learn more' link. At the bottom right, there's an 'Ads by LinkedIn Members' section featuring 'University of Phoenix'.

Introductions, InMails and Invites

As you come across the profiles in the community, LinkedIn displays several methods for adding the person to your network. Regardless if you're directly on a profile page or reviewing a listing of profiles from a search, generally these options are offered to initiate contact:

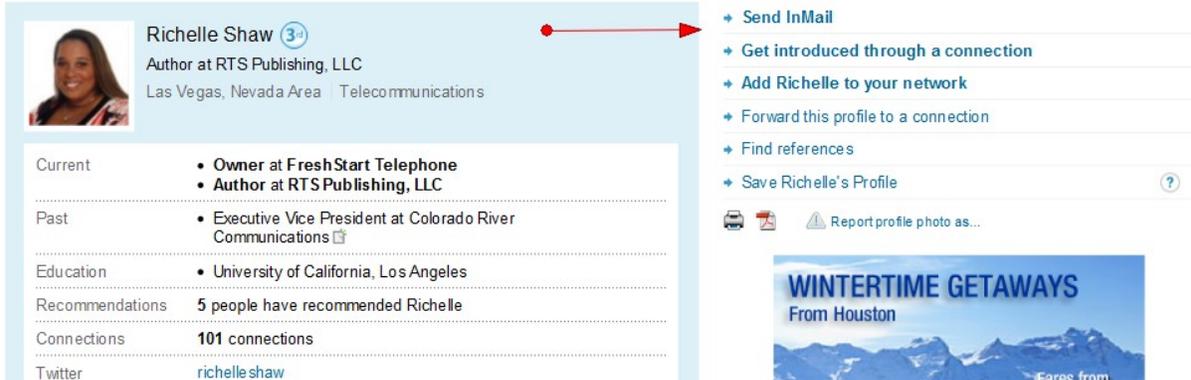

- Send InMail
- Get introduced through a connection
- Add to your network

On the profile page you'll find this information in the upper, right-hand corner. When working from a search result page, the listing has to be selected in order for contact methods to display on the right side.

Introductions: Have We Met?

Facebook has likes, Twitter has re-tweets, and LinkedIn has introductions. Designed around the principle of referrals, introductions are one of the best ways to meet new people on LinkedIn. Introductions are highly regarded because they deliver built-in trust.

The basic idea is that if you don't know a person who you would like to be connected to, find someone within your personal network who will introduce you to this person. When a potential contact sees that you're linked to someone who they know, it implies you're a credible person.

You've Got Inmails

On the other hand, InMails are a paid feature of LinkedIn enabling you to send emails directly to a person's LinkedIn mailbox, regardless if they're in your network or not. Depending on your account level, you'll receive a credit for a certain number of InMails per month. If you send an InMail but you don't get a response from the recipient after seven days, then you're account is credited for the InMail.

Although InMails require payment and you're running a risk by contacting someone who doesn't know you personally, it's an effective tool for professionals to cut to the chase in developing targeted connections. Using InMails to meet a fellow LinkedIn Member is another way to show you're serious about your business and willing to invest to grow your business.

Inroads with Invites

Technically, you can send anyone an invite at any given time. With the invite feature, you don't need a connection or a paid account to send one. However, it's highly advised to use discretion with this method. Recipients can respond by stating they don't know you, preventing you from sending the person an invitation ever again. If you receive too many "I don't know ___" responses, LinkedIn may restrict you from sending invitations altogether.

The screenshot shows the LinkedIn interface for sending an invitation. At the top, the LinkedIn logo and 'Account Type: Basic' are visible. The navigation bar includes 'Home', 'Profile', 'Contacts', 'Groups', 'Jobs', 'Inbox', 'Companies', and 'More'. A search bar with 'People' and 'Advanced' options is present. Below the navigation bar, there are links for 'Add Connections', 'Colleagues', 'Classmates', 'People You May Know', and 'View Sent Invitations'. The main content area is a dialog box titled 'Invite Richelle to connect on LinkedIn'. It contains a section 'How do you know Richelle?' with radio button options: 'Colleague', 'Classmate', 'We've done business together', 'Friend', 'Other', and 'I don't know Richelle'. Below this is a section 'Include a personal note: (optional)' with a text input field containing the text 'I'd like to add you to my professional network on LinkedIn.' and a 'Send Invitation' button. At the bottom of the dialog box, there is an 'Important' notice: 'Only invite people you know well and who know you. Find out why.' and a 'Send Invitation' button with 'or Cancel' text next to it.

Building Credibility

Establishing yourself as an expert on LinkedIn takes more than a polished profile. In the same way an offline networking group, like the Chamber of Commerce, expects more from its members than handing out nice brochures, so is it with LinkedIn. In particular, LinkedIn members want to see contributions specifically for the community.

Accomplishments of all kinds are great for earning attention from business colleagues. Yet, receiving endorsements and praise from other LinkedIn members adds an additional layer of credibility.

Some strategic ways to demonstrate your expertise on LinkedIn are with Recommendations and participating in LinkedIn Answers.

Recommendations

Similar to testimonials, business partners can leave Recommendations on your profile promoting you or your services. When you're just starting on LinkedIn, it's a good idea to encourage people you've worked with outside of the community to join and post their testimonials to your profile. A Recommendation stands as social proof from a third party that you're a skilled professional.

As stated by LinkedIn:

Users with Recommendations in their profiles are three times more likely to receive relevant offers and inquiries through searches on LinkedIn.

If you choose to do so, recommendations will appear in two places on your profile page. At the top of a profile, LinkedIn shows a Recommendation counter, while a detailed-view of each recommendation appears toward the bottom of a profile. Recommendations are visible to your personal network and Fortune 500 companies utilizing the LinkedIn Recruiter Tool.

The simplest way to get Recommendations is to ask. Satisfied clients are usually more than happy to share their experiences.

To request a recommendation through LinkedIn:

1. Select "Profile" from the navigation toolbar.
2. Choose "Recommendations" from the drop-down menu.
3. Click the tab marked "Request Recommendations".

LinkedIn Answers

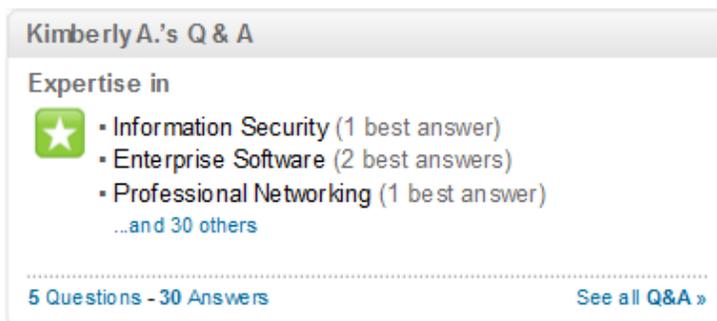

LinkedIn Answers is an ingenious system where you can ask and answer questions submitted by the LinkedIn community. Talk about an opportunity to rack up cool points in your niche! Answering questions on LinkedIn is a savvy way to be positioned as the obvious expert without being pushy or annoying.

Access the LinkedIn Answers forum by:

1. Clicking the “More” menu from the navigation toolbar.
2. Select “Answers” from the drop-down menu.

Questions are kept open for seven days. Multiple answers can be submitted by different LinkedIn members. The creator of the question picks who she thinks shared the best response. If your response is chosen as the “Best”, a green box with a star is posted on your profile page, and attached to your name in the Answer area, indicating you’re a proven expert.

All Answers are Valuable

The brilliant aspect of the process is that all answers are saved within the LinkedIn database. So if at a later point in time a member decides he would rather search through previous answers, instead of submitting a new question, those responses will be returned.

With this capability, there’s no need to worry if your answer is not picked as the “Best” all the time. All answers are logged and have the potential to generate interest and drive traffic to your profile.

How to Answer LinkedIn Questions

To answer a question:

1. Click the question.
2. Select the “Answer” button on the next page.
3. Input all details necessary into the entry form to thoroughly respond to the question.

The screenshot shows the LinkedIn 'Using LinkedIn Questions' page. At the top, there's a navigation bar with 'Home', 'Profile', 'Contacts', 'Groups', 'Jobs', 'Inbox', 'Companies', and 'More'. Below this is a search bar with 'Answers' and an 'Advanced' search option. The main content area is titled 'Using LinkedIn Questions' and has two tabs: 'Open Questions' (selected) and 'Closed Questions'. A red arrow points from the 'Open Questions' tab to the first question. The list of questions includes:

- Can group members be automatically notified when a comment or new discussion is posted? (5 answers, asked by Carol Deckert 5 hours ago)
- Is your company growing? How can you best make key contacts to increase your company's growth? (3 answers, asked by Steve Deaville 14 hours ago)
- Poll: Do Twitter updates in your LinkedIn newsfeed annoy you? (12 answers, asked by Dan Antonson 6 days ago)
- Are some people on LinkedIn getting rude or what? (57 answers, asked by Sahar Andrade 6 days ago)

On the right side, there is a 'Browse' sidebar with various categories like Administration, Business Operations, Business Travel, Career and Education, etc.

This screenshot shows the answer page for the question 'Can group members be automatically notified when a comment or new discussion is posted?'. At the top, there's a navigation bar similar to the previous screenshot. Below it, there are links for 'Answers Home', 'Advanced Answers Search', 'My Q&A', 'Ask a Question', and 'Answer Questions'. A link 'Go back to Answers Category Home | Next >' is also present.

The main content area features a profile card for Carol Deckert, a Training and Business Development expert. To the right, the question text is displayed in a yellow-bordered box. Below the question, there's a response from Carol Deckert: 'I have a closed LinkedIn Group that I operate for my local Referrals Unlimited Network (RUN Lancaster) group. Is there a way that when a new discussion is posted, or a new comment made, that an email is automatically generated to each member to tell them to go look at what has just been posted? Many thanks for your help! Carol Deckert, Networking Expert/Coach posted 6 hours ago in Using LinkedIn | Report question as...'

At the bottom, there are buttons for 'Answer', 'Suggest Expert', 'Reply Privately', and 'Share This'.

LinkedIn Groups

Joining a LinkedIn Group introduces the opportunity to strengthen connections with like-minded individuals in an exclusive forum. The Groups function provides a private space to interact with LinkedIn members that share common skills, experiences, industry affiliations, and goals.

Group leaders capitalize on this feature through providing additional benefits and access for each participant with the expectation of solidifying their overall brand and mission. It's a win-win situation. In most cases, invitations are sent out asking a person to join a group.

Nevertheless, you're allowed to initiate the process of participating in groups. For private groups, managers have the authority to accept or deny requests. The Group Directory lists all the groups currently on LinkedIn. To search the "Group Directory":

1. Select “Groups Directory” from “Groups” menu on the LinkedIn navigation bar
2. Click “Search Groups” box
3. Enter a keyword or a group name in search box. Narrow your search with the category and language selection. Click “Search”.

The Future of Networking is Here

The information presented in this report barely scratches the surface of LinkedIn. Its capabilities expand beyond the confines of being just a social media site. It's quickly evolving into a robust CRM (customer relationship management) tool for participants who understand and want to capitalize on the value of nurturing relationships for business.

With over 95 million registered users, the rate at which your network expands on LinkedIn is truly amazing. A hundred strategic contacts could mean access to millions in a short amount of time. Think about how many networking mixers you would have to attend to get those kinds of numbers!

Ultimately, if you want to position yourself as an industry leader and add to the open discussion on the issues in your market, LinkedIn is the way to do it. With a little effort, it's easy to become recognized as the go-to person in your niche utilizing this great tool.
